THE LEDGER'S WEATHER SIGNALS.

White streamer—FAIR; Blue—RAIN or SNOW; With Black ABOVE—TWO WARMER GROW; If Black BENEATH—COLDER 'TILL we see; Unless Black's shown—no change we'll see.

The above forecasts are made for a period of thirty-six hours, ending at 8 o'clock to-morrow evening.

WHY PEACE WAS DECLARED.

The pipes of the palace got leaky, And the king for a plumber sent; The plumber was smart and cheery, And with ominous smile he went.

For a year he kept plumbing, that plumber, And perhaps he is plumbing still; But you never saw a man dumber Than the king when he saw his bill.

The king was in deadly straits With another king near by, At a dreadful cost of life And drain on his treasury.

But he forthwith stooped that war; 'Twas the best thing he could do; For he couldn't raise money for the war and the plumber too.

Mrs. W. C. PELHAM of this city took first premium at Paris Fair for half dozen doilies.

A SAD DEATH.

Mrs. Dr. C. C. Owens Passes Away at an Early Hour Yesterday Morning.

The entire community was shocked and grieved yesterday morning when the sorrowful news passed from household to household that Mrs. Ethel Johnson Owens, wife of Dr. C. C. Owens, was dead.

On the quiet Sabbath morn, having just entered the proud and triumphant era of a christian woman's life—motherhood,—the Master beckoned and she followed. The same infinite Power graciously and mercifully spared the young life just ushered into the world, as a solace to the grief-stricken husband and father and the sorrowing mother and sisters.

Her death occurred at about 9 o'clock at the home of her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson, on West Fourth street. She had been in unusual good health and spirits until the hour of her fatal illness. "Death fell upon her like an untimely frost upon the sweetest flower." Beautiful in life, her death was but the fading into heaven of her Christian being. Realizing fully the approach of death, she lived to the end, a loving, unselfish woman. Her unselfishness to the very last was paramount to everything else. "I'm going home to heaven," were her last words, fully conscious.

The funeral will take place to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock from the Church of the Nativity. Friends of the family are invited to be present.

Mrs. Owens was born on the 12th of February, 1871, and was therefore just 21 years and 7 months old at the time of her death. On the 14th of November, 1891, she was united in marriage to Dr. C. C. Owens. The wedding was the culmination of many years of love and courtship. It seemed that a long life of happiness was assured to them. Their short married life was one of continuous love and joy. The devotion of Mr. and Mrs. Owens to one another was a byword among those who admire domestic happiness.

For the husband so suddenly bereft there is abundant sympathy, heartfelt and sincere.

A MYSTERIOUS case of poisoning occurred in Louisville, resulting in the death of Mrs. Edward Sherrill and Mrs. Emma Austin. Mrs. Sherrill had spent the night with the Austin woman who kept a house of bad repute. After eating coffee and cakes for breakfast they were taken violently ill and died in a few hours.

JUDAS CANDLE of Menifee county, hearing that a mob was coming from Montgomery county to lynch Alonzo Brookshire, in company with the Sheriff, took the prisoner through the mountains to the Kentucky Union Railway and took him to Lexington. The mob reached Frenchburg twenty minutes after the posse with the prisoner had left.

A KINGDOM OF CRANKS.

Chicago and Her World's Fair the Center of Attraction at Present.

A grand army of cranks have attacked the World's Fair. The first installment came in the form of the translator species. Tower cranks, too, are many and of infinite variety. One man had an ingenious scheme for dropping people from the top of a structure, which was to out-Eiffel Eiffel, "right into the bottom of a very deep well." Another crank proposed a sort of gigantic cross between a windmill and a diving machine, which was to whirl adventurous passengers through the clouds.

A New York crank applied for permission to locate within the site the terminus of a pneumatic tube, of the dimensions of a tunnel, through which he contemplated shooting visitors to the World's Fair. The time required for the journey from New York to Chicago by this route, the ingenious inventor stated, would be considerably less than an hour, but he neglected to say whether the baggage and the breath of the voyager would be fired with him or sent by the next shot.

The greatest trial the management has to contend with is, perhaps, the poet, notwithstanding the widely published fact that Miss Harriet Monroe has written a poem which has been officially accepted for the dedication.

A woman from Texas wrote that she had lots of lovely poems in manuscript, but if those Exposition folks thought she was fool enough to send them on and they were going to get them for nothing, they were just barking up the wrong tree. If, however, she was offered a handsome regular salary, she would agree to come on to headquarters at once, fetching the poems along, and stay right on the spot, ready to furnish all the World's Fair poetry required, to order, fresh and strong.

A South American poet offered a poem upon the conversion of St. Paul, urging its peculiar appropriateness as a dedication ode. The author insisted upon reading it himself. He said it would take him nine consecutive days to do it, but he was perfectly willing to read it as often as the Exposition management wished. It contained 6944 lines and had taken him 29 years to write it.

A strange, feeble, little old man, whom nobody knows, wanders day after day about the corridor offering for sale to the hurrying, impatient passers-by what he calls a piece of the oldest wood in the world. It is a very ordinary and very dirty chip, done up in soiled cotton wool in a tiny paper box. Another old man—wild-eyed and disheveled—with the dust of country roads on his garments, rushed into the Construction Department and proceeded to point out to the distinguished architects of National reputation there assembled the errors in their plans. A curious, hysterical little woman haunts offices seeking data for biographical sketches, and weeps when snubbed by Exposition officials who have suffered long and much in this direction. She merely waits until she gets what she wants.

BUB HEELE, who murdered Napoleon Adcock of Hopkins county in 1883, has been captured in Arkansas and turned over to the Kentucky authorities.

TOM FULTON, Charles Morrison and Ike Fish, three notorious thieves, broke jail at Princeton. It is thought their escape was effected by outside assistance.

CONGRESSMAN W. C. P. BRECKINRIDGE has consented to deliver the annual oration at the reunion in St. Louis, October 3d, of the Travelers' Protective Association.

THE reunion of the Blue and the Gray at Grange City was a pleasant affair. The old soldiers of both armies were addressed by Judge W. H. Holt and Hon. John P. McCartney.

THE English authorities claim that cholera has been stamped out of the United Kingdom, the disease being limited to those who arrived from cholera-infected regions.

WILLIAM RUNDY and Cola Wendell, both of Ashland and both with a jag on, took a buggy ride at Catlettsburg. The horse ran away and dumped them. Randy was killed and Wendell was fined $15.

GENERAL A. W. GREELEY, the head of the United States Signal Corps (though not of the Weather Bureau as many people still suppose), ridicules the idea of signaling the people of Mars. He regards it an unreasonable assumption to think that planet inhabited by a race at all like human beings in intelligence and civilization.

GEORGE ROBERTSON BRADLEY, only son of Hon. William O. Bradley, died Friday at Lancaster of typhoid fever, after an illness of thirty-two days. He was in his 24th year, and a bright, promising young lawyer, who would have kept the name of Bradley still before the eyes of Kentuckians who delight in honoring his father. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, conducted by Rev. J. C. Randolph of Danville.

It will interest our citizens—now that Maysville has risen to the dignity of a Free Delivery Postoffice—to learn that Postmaster General Wanmaker has issued an order deputizing Postmasters of free delivery cities, towns and rural communities to put up letter boxes, on the request of citizens, for the collection and delivery of mail at house doors. The order affects nearly 3,000,000 residents to which the free delivery service is already extended, and it is regarded by postal experts as the most important departure in the free delivery of mails since the beginning of the system under Postmaster General Blair. The canvas made for boxes to be recommended have lasted over two years, and the recommended boxes have stood the test of actual experience.

DENIES IT.

Dr. Jenkins Comments on the Normannia's Appeal.

Indeed the Doctor Goes so Far as to Make Use of the Word Lie.

He Says He is Not to Be Blamed For Any Shortcomings in the Treatment of Passengers—It is the Fault of the Ship Company.

New York, Sept. 12.—The Herald publishes an interview with Dr. Jenkins, the health officer. When asked about the appeal of the Normannia passengers to Gov. Flower, he said:

"What nonsense! How ridiculous! That's a lie!" were his emphatic comments as he listened, and no one of the counts in the least disturbed him. He said: "In a general way I will say that the gentlemen who have drawn up and signed this appeal—excellent people, no doubt—are entirely mistaken in their assertions. They have not been neglected, we are not incompetent and the situation on the Normannia is not at all what they declare it to be. I can sum the whole thing up in a nutshell by saying that these cabin passengers want very much to get ashore and write accordingly."

"But, doctor, they make positive and detailed statements, for instance, that the dead bodies of cholera patients have been left on the steamer for twenty-four hours or more."

"And I make a positive statement that such is not the case. I have not known of a dead body being left for that length of time on the Normannia. Have you, Dr. Tallmage?"

"No, sir," was the deputy health officer's prompt reply.

"They say that the steamer has not been properly fumigated."

"That is silly. Why, we have done nothing but fumigate and disinfect these steamers ever since they arrived. It is true that certain portions of this work ordered by us were left to be carried out by the officers of the steamer. We cannot be everywhere at the same time, and the Normannia people must not imagine that theirs is the only ship in the bay. Possibly on one or two occasions there has been a lack of disinfectants on the steamers. I believe that is a fact, but it is not my fault. The Hamburg-American Co. has been instructed by us to send disinfectants to their ships in sufficient quantities. I can't take the blame if they will not do what I tell them."

"Do you mean that it is the business of the steamship company to furnish disinfectants?"

"Yes, but I would add that in view of the importance of the matter of disinfectants on board, Dr. Walsen took enough of bi-chloride of mercury to the Normannia the other day to disinfect a dozen steamers. Isn't that so, doctor?"

"It certainly is," said the New Brighton physician, who is a cholera veteran. "I would say after a thorough visitation and inspection of the Normannia that this complaint or appeal is absolutely without justification."

"And how absurd it is for them to pretend that they have not been in communication with a medical expert," continued Dr. Jenkins. "Dr. Sanborn, who has been a quarantine official for years, has been aboard the Normannia several times a day, and is now stationed there permanently day and night. Besides that, from the very first, full instructions were given to the ship's surgeon for any emergencies which might arise."

"How about the water?" "The captain of the Normannia immediately on his arrival received positive orders to boil his entire supply of drinking water, so that it might have been used with impunity wherever it came from the river Elbe or anywhere else. Furthermore, the Hamburg-American company was ordered to send a regular supply of water to their ships. In this respect again they have, I believe, failed in their duty."

"Then you admit that the Normannia and perhaps the other steamers also may have been insufficiently supplied with drinking water?"

"It is quite possible, but it is the company's fault, not mine. I have felt the urgency of the matter so keenly that several times, although it is quite out of my jurisdiction, I have sent supplies of water down to these steamers from my own reservoir here on Staten Island, and in my own tug, the Manhattan."

"Why is it the company has failed to supply the steamers with water? Did they not know it was their business?"

"They knew it perfectly well, but pretended they could not find water boats to do the work. They said the captains were afraid of being held in quarantine if they approached the infected vessels. This is nonsense! I would not have detained them."

"And how long are the three steamers in lower quarantine to go with this uncertain water supply?"

"Not any longer. Saturday morning I sent down three thousand gallons of water, and Sunday I think the company will begin to dispatch water boats regularly. They are awakening to a sense of their responsibility."
